(Los Angeles, CA) Author/actress Mara Puri launches another installment of the Where the Heart Lives series, Where the Heart Lives on Tuesday, October 9, 2012. The highly anticipated novel offers readers a rich painting of cross-connecting storylines that take us to some of California's most spectacular locations. Puri also serves up an array of themes and each of them more moving than the next.

Excuses for story takes the reader through an expanded trip through her home territory.

As never written about by some city Los Angeles, Puri admitted, "My readers will get an in-depth look of the L.A. of the 1980s as my protagonist travels from the iconic Venice neighborhood, to Hollywood, then onto her way through the Angeles Crest Mountains out to the Mojave Desert."

Puri books part romance, part mystery, and part soap opera are considered the Where the Heart Lives genre, which includes Whisper Haven. Out's larger it's scope with room for Puri's new production and more realistic plot and character development.

My writing is romantic, which is why much of my search are the Romance category. But my stories don't follow a strict set of rules of a classic Romance novel, Puri said. My concept of romance is a good deal more complex. And the romance storylines have fitting and satisfying conclusions by the end of the Paralogy. What, Where, Why, Who and When for the questions of the heart asked in each of the book titles are answered.
